PARALYMPIC ATHLETE

Today we had 3 paralympic athletes visit us, and held a meeting with the children. They were in traffic accidents as children, and have lower body paralysis, lost a leg, or lost both legs. They talked about their bitter experiences to the children without any concern. They were all very young when the accidents happened, and they did not necessarily speak of it as success stories, but that it was the result of them pursuing what they loved. They spoke in a very kind and easy to understand way for the children, and it was a very meaningful time for them. I think the reception was varied from the year 1 to the year 9 students, but their stories were definitely impactful on them all. A number of parents were also present, and even from an adult's standpoint they were an inspiration, and I think it was overall very educational. When watching them, they made us view obstacles not as a minus, but as a plus to their own strength. I certainly felt that they must have worked very hard in order to get here. Finally, the children were allowed to touch the gold medals, saying things such as "Wow, it's heavy!" and "Is this real?" From the parents there were a lot of questions along the lines of "Is the whole thing made of gold?"

Their biggest goal seems to be the Beijing Paralympics in 4 years time. I hope that we can all support them in this challenge. Once again I applaud these 3 athletes! Thank you.

Children, be careful of cars!
Parents, be careful when driving!

17 years before he got the gold medal, on March 13th, was also the day that he was in the accident, and I had a mysterious feeling that the tragedy of the accident turned into the joy of the gold medal. Received the purple ribbon in the Spring of 2014.

All of us at the Canterbury Japanese Supplementary School are supporting you! Do your best!

A message to the parents.

We brought this up at the school information meeting, but we are asking again. We are aware that the school opening on Saturday is an important meeting place for parents. However we sometimes see that parents get so absorbed in the conversation that they forget about their children. Please do not lose sight of your children. Just last week, there was a case of a lower year level student standing alone in the dark saying "Mum's not here." Please make sure that children are within sight of their parents. Also when letting children play during class times, please be aware of the time and place.
